

Shana F. Marbury, Esq. oversees legal affairs for the Greater Cleveland Partnership (GCP), addressing nonprofit governance, employment, intellectual property, tax and other corporate legal issues.

She is also responsible for building, launching and maintaining inclusive frameworks for GCP workforce development initiatives while representing the business community perspective on quality public school education.

Prior to joining GCP, Marbury worked as a diversity and inclusion consultant. She assisted in developing diversity training focused on interpersonal relationships among people of a variety of backgrounds, worldviews, customs and values in the 21st-century workplace.

Marbury also has experience as a labor, employment and school law attorney. She serves on many boards and committees, including the Centers for Families and Children, The City Club of Cleveland and the Cleveland Transformation Alliance. She also is a member of Kaleidoscope magazine's "40/40 Club," which honors distinguished African American professionals in the Cleveland area.
