

Brunswick University Center expands its offerings to attract students of all ages

Cuyahoga Community College plays a vital role in the local economy, offering quality, affordable education that is accessible and targeted to workforce demands. Tri-C's® Brunswick University Center (BUC) is now offering more professional development classes and introducing workforce-training programs.

Because of the success of ISO, project management, leadership and Lean Six Sigma classes, BUC has added a dozen new classes with subjects ranging from Dealing with Difficult People to Plexus: Transitioning to IATF 16949. Registration has begun for fall semester.

Manufacturing Technology Center of Excellence will be piloting workforce manufacturing training courses this fall. A Right Skills Now machining program will work directly with a business to meet its need for computer numerical control, or CNC machinists. The program includes eight weeks of training and an eight-week internship at the employer's site. Tri-C is also collaborating with Medina County Economic Development Corporation on a machining apprenticeship program. A student in the program will take credit classes at BUC and then complete the apprenticeship with a Medina County employer.

Additionally, College Credit Plus, available to middle and high school students who want to earn college credits, will include a robotics program this fall. Students will learn to build and power robots using Arduino.

Youth Summer Camps are returning to BUC, and Encore is expanding its offerings to Fridays. Registration is now open for summer camps: Stop Motion Animation, Young Filmmakers & Photography Studio, STEM K'NEX® and Tech Kids. For the perpetual adult learner, Encore classes start July 14 for residents ages 55 and older. The Beatles and the Cultural Revolution of the 1960s, Game Show Fun and Glory Days of Cleveland Professional Sports are a few of the 17 classes offered.
