Art, Artists and Their Environments:

Across six sessions focused on collection objects and special exhibitions at the Cleveland Museum of Art (CMA), participants will learn how environments — natural, human-made, political and social — and their changes have influenced artists' choices. We will look at the influences on subject matter, materials, processes and style. Individual session topics will include the symbolic use of nature in European Renaissance art; the archaeological origins of ancient works in the museum's collection; the artistic use and conservation of natural materials; how the natural environment of southern China influenced artistic production; how photography depicted the changing social and political landscape of 20th- and 21st-century China; and how the urban setting of Paris and its working-class populace inspired the art of Edgar Degas. The course includes visits to CMA's special exhibitions, China's Southern Paradise: Treasures From the Lower Yangzi Delta and Degas and the Laundress: Women, Work and Impressionism, a special session featuring the Education Art Collection and guest speakers from the conservation and curatorial departments.

Their stories show Black and white united in a common goal to end slavery and save Freedom Seekers. Bring good walking shoes to meet these men and women throughout the 60-plus acres in the heart of the city. Dorothy Salem, educational outreach coordinator at Woodland Cemetery, will lead the tour.
