

John Corlett serves as president and executive director of the Center for Community Solutions. His career has included leadership roles in both the public and private sectors, including serving as vice president for government relations and community affairs at The MetroHealth System and as Medicaid director for the State of Ohio.

Corlett has held leadership roles in various community organizations focused on families, children, behavioral health and women's health and has received many state, regional and local awards. He serves on the boards for The Centers for Families and Children, the Greater Cleveland Food Bank and the Woodruff Foundation.