

BUILDING THE WORKFORCE FOR THE FUTURE

Mr. Rick Chiricosta,
Chairperson,
Tri-C Foundation

On behalf of our Board of Directors, I am pleased to welcome Megan O'Bryan as vice president, development & Tri-C Foundation. Megan brings two decades of philanthropic and leadership experience to us, most recently having served as executive director of the Cleveland Transformation Alliance. In this role she led the newly-launched public-private nonprofit organization in reinventing public education in the city to carry out an unprecedented education reform plan. We are fortunate to have Megan join us and channel her excitement for Cleveland and education to benefit our entire community through the Tri-C Foundation!

This is an exciting time for the Tri-C Foundation, as we continue to expand partnerships within the community for our collective benefit. An example is the recent support of the KeyBank Foundation to enhance public safety education and training. Additionally, a grant from Alcoa Foundation will provide upgrades in the Manufacturing Center of Excellence.

This funding, along with that of many other generous donors, is vital to training tomorrow's workforce and keeping Tri-C graduates – our region's future workforce – prepared for in-demand jobs. As always, I thank you for your continued support of the College and the Tri-C Foundation!

KeyBank Foundation Grant to Enhance Public Safety Training

A new grant from the KeyBank Foundation will help to expand Tri-C's public safety training program.

Enhancing training for future public safety professionals is the focus of a brand-new, $1.4 million grant awarded by the KeyBank Foundation. The grant will support high-quality training for students pursuing careers as law enforcement officers, firefighters, paramedics and other in-demand public safety occupations in Northeast Ohio.

The initiative will include a campaign to recruit minority and female candidates for first-responder jobs, as well as outreach programs to U.S. military veterans and the creation of a youth-focused Summer Academy. The grant will also provide scholarship opportunities for students.

"This generous gift from the KeyBank Foundation will provide a great opportunity for youth by expanding training programs in the public safety sector and providing scholarship opportunities," said Clayton Harris, vice president and dean of criminal justice at Tri-C.

"These program enhancements will lead to pathways towards successful careers and four-year study. This will help to engage

A Foundation for the Future

This is an exciting time for Cuyahoga Community College (Tri-C®), the city of Cleveland and the entire region. As the nation focuses on our city this summer, we are positioned to leverage and showcase the College; thus providing unique opportunities to forge new partnerships and enhance the viability of the region.

The Foundation is also forging a new chapter as Megan O'Bryan joins us as the new vice president of development and the Tri-C Foundation. Megan's work in leadership positions on boards and committees of numerous Northeast Ohio organizations has showcased her commitment to the community and desire to ensure equal access to quality education.

I had the distinct pleasure of working closely with Megan while she served as a member of our Board of Trustees, as well as in her former role as executive director of the Cleveland Transformation Alliance. Megan's passion and insight, combined with her commitment to the College's mission, will be invaluable in leading the fundraising efforts on behalf of the students and the College. Please join me in welcoming Megan in her new role.

As always, I thank you for supporting Cuyahoga Community College, the Tri-C Foundation and the students we serve. ■

Event Honors Long-term Dedication of Gloria Moosmann

Gloria Moosmann's future began at Tri-C when she enrolled in evening classes in the former Brownell Junior High building. Before long, she was working for the College's first president, Dr. Charles Chapman. As they say, the rest is history.

Holding the distinction of serving all four of the College's presidents, she worked in the College's Finance/Risk Management and Human Resources departments before assuming leadership of the Tri-C Foundation in 1999. Since then she has secured more than $230 million in funding for programs and scholarships benefiting Tri-C students. She is continuing to serve as a member of the Cuyahoga Community College Foundation Board of Directors.

Cuyahoga Community College and the Tri-C Foundation gathered on Wednesday, December 2, 2015 to celebrate her more than 45 years of passionate dedication to enabling student success, with more than 200 guests in attendance. Dr. Alex Johnson announced the establishment of the Gloria Moosmann Endowed Scholarship Fund, which will continue to benefit Tri-C students. If you wish to make a donation to the fund in Gloria's honor, please contact the Tri-C Foundation at 216-987-4868 or visit www.tri-c.edu/donate. ■

The Gloria Moosmann Endowed Scholarship Fund will help to provide students with support to complete their education for years to come.

our youth in in-demand careers as we work to fill vacancies left by retiring professionals. Every fire, police and EMS chief needs females and minorities to join their forces. This grant will allow Tri-C to meet the needs for the public safety workforce of the future,” Harris said.

Employment projections for Northeast Ohio show a critical need for protective service personnel, with nearly 1,500 job openings expected each year through 2022. Much of the need is based on replacing retiring workers, particularly in law enforcement.

The goal under the grant is to increase the annual number of graduates from Tri-C’s Public Safety Training Center by 35 percent over the four-year period. Larger increases are targeted for minorities (54 percent) and women (97 percent).

“KeyBank and KeyBank Foundation have a long history of supporting Cuyahoga Community College programs that are designed to build a thriving workforce,” said Margot Copeland, chair and CEO of the KeyBank Foundation. “The enhanced public safety education and training programs will benefit from structured career pathways that lead to college credentials, job placement and long-term job retention. With this investment, we’re educating a workforce dedicated to helping build safe and thriving neighborhoods throughout Cuyahoga County.”

To better connect these public safety program graduates with employers, Tri-C will create an outreach specialist position to oversee student, employer and community engagement.

“Generous support from the KeyBank Foundation will enable Cuyahoga Community College to expand its public safety training program to meet local workforce needs,” said Dr. Alex Johnson, Tri-C president. “The partnership between KeyBank and Cuyahoga Community College has increased completion of higher education, helping to enhance the future of our community.”

The Public Safety Training Center at the Western Campus of Tri-C opened in 2014. The regional center offers specialized training opportunities for police, fire and emergency medical technicians and includes state-of-the-art training tools such as a two-story burn building, an indoor shooting range, a paved area to learn driving techniques and an above-ground trench training area to practice confined-space rescues.

As a regional facility for Northeast Ohio, the Center delivers law enforcement and public safety training for municipal departments throughout Ohio. The College offers associate degrees in criminal justice, fire technology, and emergency medical technology. ■

Westfield Insurance Foundation Makes a Difference in Women's Lives at Tri-C

Westfield Insurance Group has been a generous partner of Tri-C's Women in Transition (WIT) program for nearly a decade. Recently, the Westfield Insurance Foundation provided a grant to enhance the program and help families achieve greater stability.

The grant, which reflects Westfield's focus on family stability and providing assistance to organizations that offer comprehensive approaches to help families overcome challenges, will help create program pathways linking Women in Transition participants and their children with the College's Saturday Family Academy. The academy emphasizes families working together to reach academic, employment and life goals.

The WIT program began in 1978 and has contributed to thousands of personal success stories, serving approximately 250 participants each year. It provides support, services, and referrals to help empower women who are experiencing one or more transitions in their lives. Participants build confidence and self-esteem through curriculum focused on personal development, career exploration, basic computer training, life skills workshops, financial literacy, and health and wellness.

"Westfield recognizes that vulnerable families face multiple issues and we want to help nonprofits in their approaches to reducing more than one barrier to success," said Jani Groza, Westfield Insurance Foundation executive director and Westfield Insurance community investment leader. "When we look at the nonprofit agencies we support, we see unique insights into the demographic they serve, whether it's parents or children."

The Tri-C Foundation appreciates the long-term support of Westfield. ■

Run for WIT to Raise Scholarship Support for Tri-C Students

The Tri-C Foundation is grateful for the support of Rachel Von Hendrix, user experience designer at Westfield, and member of the Cuyahoga Community College Board of Trustees, for her unwavering commitment to helping women achieve their goals. Her passion for supporting the women of Women in Transition (WIT) extends far beyond the board room. In May, she will Run for WIT in the Rite Aid Cleveland Half Marathon, raising funds to provide scholarships for participants in Tri-C's Women in Transition program to pursue a degree or certificate.

"Running is a metaphor of life. Every day, extraordinary WIT women run through obstacles to change their lives at Tri-C. WIT empowers them to keep moving forward, helping them realize they're capable of so much more than they thought. Together, we can help them achieve success in the marathon of their lives as these courageous women embark upon the journey of a brighter future," Trustee Von Hendrix said.

Partnership with Alcoa Foundation Provides Support of Youth, Veterans, and Manufacturing Training

Continued generous support from Alcoa Foundation helps prepare students of Cuyahoga Community College, from youth to veterans, to succeed in and contribute to a 21st century workforce. Through its long-term partnership Alcoa Foundation has demonstrated its steadfast commitment to the College's mission.

Tri-C's Youth Technology Academy (YTA) engages underserved students in grades 9-12 in cutting-edge, experiential Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics (STEM) education with real-world applications. Alcoa's recent gift for YTA will provide extended opportunities for STEM engagement, including robotics education and competitions, to ignite interest in and development of STEM skills.

Additional funding from Alcoa supports Tri-C's Veterans Services Centers by providing the resources to maintain a veterans coordinator who provides critical outreach and support services for our veterans enrolled or interested in enrolling in the College, with a focus on workforce training programs. With Alcoa's support, we are helping our veterans transfer the important skills and knowledge they developed in the military while they gain additional education, which helps prepare them to re-enter and succeed in the workforce.

As advanced manufacturing continues to be a driver of Northeast Ohio's economy, representing approximately 14 percent of all jobs within the region, the need for graduates with increased technical skills continues to grow. Alcoa's investment in Tri-C's Advanced Manufacturing Integrated Systems Design program will provide new essential equipment for this innovative program and support its best-practice training, making Tri-C students more proficient with smart manufacturing methods, and better preparing them for in-demand, high-growth industrial jobs. ■

Grant Helps Prepare High School Teachers to Earn College Credit Plus Credentials

A grant from the Ohio Department of Education and Ohio Department of Higher Education will help to expand the reach of Tri-C for College Credit Plus, a completion-focused program. The College is leading a consortium that seeks to identify and support high school teachers in becoming qualified to teach College Credit Plus courses in the high school setting. The project will support 60 high school instructors as they work towards College Credit Plus qualifications. High school instructors will be engaged, with help from the Educational Service Center-Cuyahoga County, from economically disadvantaged school districts. Funds will also support program promotion and outreach to high school instructors, done in collaboration with College Now Greater Cleveland, Esperanza, Higher Education Compact of Greater Cleveland and Tri-C's Youth Technology Academy. ■

2016 Tri-C JazzFest, Presented by KeyBank Runs June 23-25!

Cleveland's theater district is the place to be as JazzFest fills the theaters and heats up the street with music, food and free family activities. The 2016 lineup offers something for every musical taste, from Lalah Hathaway, Chick Corea and Terence Blanchard to David Sanborn and Maceo Parker.

In addition to nine ticketed concerts opening with Tommy LiPuma's Big Birthday Bash – featuring Diana Krall, Al Jarreau, Leon Russell and Dr. John – JazzFest offers two days of free outdoor concerts by local and regional bands on the Strassman Insurance Services Stage on the Plaza.

Up-and-coming artists Somi and Melissa Aldana will make their Cleveland debuts and Dominick Farinacci will perform his CD release concert. Discovered by Wynton Marsalis while attending music classes at Tri-C, Farinacci has been touring with his band and serving as a global ambassador for Jazz at Lincoln Center. His new release on Mack Avenue Records was produced by Tommy LiPuma and recorded last winter in Tri-C's Tommy LiPuma Center for Creative Arts.

Kid-friendly activities will be featured in the U.S. Bank Kid Bop Tent, along with balloon twisters, puppets and stilt walkers. Tri-C's Hospitality Management Center will conduct cooking demonstrations and tastings, Playhouse Square restaurants will offer patio-dining and food truck options will also be available.

Tri-C JazzFest, presented by KeyBank, is made possible with the generous support of donors, including KeyBank, the National Endowment for the Arts, the Ohio Arts Council, The George Gund Foundation, Fran and Jules Belkin, Strassman Insurance Services Inc., Dominion, The Char and Chuck Fowler Family Foundation, U.S. Bank, Advantage Consulting Services LTD, Constellation Brands, Great Lakes Brewing Co. and United. The festival runs June 23-25, 2016.

Supporting Tri-C Provides Dividends for Our Entire Region

I have been pleased to serve as a Director of the Cuyahoga Community College Foundation for nearly 13 years. Through this association, I have had the opportunity to see firsthand that scholarships truly make a difference in our community and have a direct impact on the lives of Tri-C students. Every day our supporters help shape the future through their support of the Foundation, the College and its students.

These are the reasons why I am a passionate advocate of Tri-C in my role at Dominion, where we invest in communities through programs, volunteer activities and charitable giving. The Dominion Foundation is dedicated to improving the physical, social and economic well-being of the communities served by Dominion companies.

Through our partnership with the Tri-C Foundation, we have been able to assist in effecting positive change through scholarship support, such as helping those who have some but not all of the funding they need to complete their degrees, along with funding for program enhancements, such as our support of the College's engineering program. Supporting our region's youth through initiatives including the JazzFest Music Camp to engage the next generation of great musicians and provide enhanced community outreach programming have been a long-term priority for Dominion.

Supporting Cuyahoga Community College is an important investment for the future sustainability of our community and will provide a lasting impact for generations to come. ■

Tri-C Foundation Establishes Scholarship Program to Support CMSD Attendance Campaign

The Tri-C Foundation launched a scholarship program to recognize hardworking Cleveland Metropolitan School District (CMSD) students who graduate with excellent attendance records. This effort is in conjunction with CMSD's "Get 2 School. You Can Make It!" campaign.

Tri-C will award the scholarships to 28 students, each individual representing a CMSD high school with a graduating class. Each scholarship will provide up to $2,500 annually for two academic years for tuition, fees, books and academic supplies.

"Academic success begins with students being in class ready to learn," Tri-C President Dr. Alex Johnson said. "Cuyahoga Community College is pleased to partner with CMSD on its campaign to improve attendance and provide scholarships that will enable more youth to enroll in college, complete their degrees and contribute to the success of our community."

To be eligible for consideration, CMSD students must have a minimum 3.0 GPA and be on track to complete their senior year with fewer than 10 absences. Students will be recommended by their schools and recipients must attend Tri-C on a full-time basis beginning with the fall semester after their high school graduation.

"We are grateful for the investment that the Tri-C Foundation is making in scholarships for CMSD students," CMSD CEO Eric Gordon said. "The ongoing commitment and partnership that we have with Tri-C will continue to help more of our scholars compete for and succeed in the jobs of tomorrow." ■

EMPLOYEE DONOR PROFILE

Kathryn McAtee, Ph.D.

As a single, working mother, uncertain of which career she wanted to pursue, Kathryn McAtee, Ph.D. enrolled at Tri-C in the 1970s to take a few courses. She began full-time work at Swagelok, where she remained for 16 years. Despite her stable employment, she missed the classroom.

Dr. McAtee transferred her Tri-C credits to Hiram College, and ultimately graduated from Baldwin Wallace College (now Baldwin Wallace University) with a degree in business administration. She continued down the path of higher education and later earned her MBA from John Carroll University. In 2001, her path led her back to Tri-C as a faculty member and she has never looked back. While teaching at Tri-C, Dr. McAtee continued her own education, earning both her master's and Ph.D. from Cleveland State University.

She credits her family for supporting her through those early years and consequently relates well to the struggles that Tri-C students face because, as she notes, "I've been there."

As a firm believer in the mission of community colleges where the focus remains on students, she is grateful for the support that she received along her own educational journey. That is one of the reasons she is an enthusiastic supporter of scholarships through the Tri-C Foundation, which reflects her continued commitment to student success and the accessibility of postsecondary education.

When asked why she believes so strongly in scholarship support, she said, "It is important to give back to students so that they can continue their education and have the opportunities that they deserve. Through scholarship funds, that goal is attainable." ■

Leap into the Talent Pool with Faculty Externships

Cuyahoga Community College is leading a regional effort to increase internship and co-operative education experiences (co-ops) for students at two-year institutions, four-year institutions and at Ohio Technical Centers. Faculty are integral to engaging students in internships and co-ops and play an important role in connecting classroom learning to workplace application. A grant from the Ohio Department of Higher Education is providing professional development for faculty, including placement on a brief project in an advanced manufacturing setting, called an externship. While there, faculty externs gain exposure to the latest technologies and current industry needs, which they bring back to their classrooms.

"We have seen that by connecting the region's outstanding faculty with industry on a meaningful project, a long-term relationship will form," says Diane Rossa, MAGNET's Workforce and Talent

Tri-C adjunct instructor, Mr. Antoine Brown, is participating in an externship through an Ohio Department of Higher Education grant.

Development Manager. "Because faculty always have student education in mind, these relationships often lead to internships for students," she added.

To date, 10 companies have signed up to accept faculty externs who will provide their expertise in such things as product and solutions development, systems review, workflow analysis, and to assist with research. If your business is interested in partnering and being matched with faculty expertise, call 216-987-3490 or email nancy.kreigh@tri-c.edu.

Higher education faculty, whether they provide instruction in manufacturing or not, are building the pipeline of up-and-coming workers for Northeast Ohio's prominent advanced manufacturing industry. Cuyahoga Community College is pleased to work with our colleagues across the region to enhance how we prepare students for careers in advanced manufacturing. ■

Monique Menefee-Profitt

Following an honorable discharge from the U.S. Air Force, Monique Menefee-Profitt found herself – and her toddler daughter – homeless. Living out of her car, she knew she wanted more out of life, relying on her faith and resolve to keep her motivated.

After getting herself back on her feet and making a home for her daughter, Profitt landed on Tri-C’s Metropolitan Campus and enrolled in the federal TRIO program, which helps underserved and first generation individuals complete their postsecondary education and prepare for successful post-baccalaureate programs.

As a veteran, she was an active member of the College’s Veterans Today Club, which helps student veterans transition and adapt to academic life, and provides peer support and an opportunity to develop and demonstrate leadership skills. She also became an advocate for the College’s Veterans Initiative, promoting awareness regarding the need to support veterans.

“Tri-C’s Veterans Initiative helped with my adjustment to everyday life and to my college career. The individualized support and assistance I received made all the difference in my life,” she recalls.

It wasn’t long before this tenacious woman found herself at the head of the class, inducted into the

Monique Menefee-Profitt

Phi Theta Kappa Honor Society which recognizes scholarship among two-year college students. Profitt earned a Tri-C Foundation scholarship and was chosen to serve as the College’s Board Student Scholar for the 2008-2009 academic year. By the time she completed her tenure in that role, she had earned three degrees from Tri-C: an Associate of Arts, an Associate of Science and an Associate of Business.

Continuing her studies, she earned her bachelor’s and master’s degrees and was appointed by Ohio Governor John Kasich as the board of trustees graduate representative to the Kent State University Board of Trustees.

Profitt stated, “Tri-C is one of the greatest places I have encountered on my journey. I will forever be grateful for all the support and many wonderful people who took time to help foster the person I have become. Tri-C will always be home.”

Today, she serves as the associate director of Career-Technical Transfer Initiatives, Ohio Articulation and Transfer Network, for the Ohio Department of Higher Education. She is passionately dedicated to education and helping others reach their educational goals and aspirations.

“My future began at Tri-C,” Profitt says. ■

Invest in People, Build a Thriving Economy

As I begin my tenure as vice president of development and Tri-C Foundation, I join an amazing Board and staff dedicated to helping students along their Tri-C path so they may achieve their education and employment goals. Every day at Cuyahoga Community College, thousands of students are taking steps on their journey toward a successful future. For many of our students, roadblocks and detours have the potential to impede their success. The Tri-C Foundation is focused on reducing these barriers so that our students can reach their final destination, whether that is viable employment or transferring to a four-year institution.

As you will read throughout this issue of Invest in People, your support for the Tri-C Foundation makes a huge impact on the health, vitality and prosperity of our community. In fact, for every dollar invested in Cuyahoga Community College, $10.50 in economic benefit is provided back to the region. One way we fuel the economy is by training our workforce to be prepared to meet the growing and evolving needs of employers across Northeast Ohio.

An educated and prepared workforce is essential to the future of our community. The Tri-C Foundation is grateful to our donors for taking an active role in partnering with us to develop our workforce. The Foundation also appreciates the support of the many scholarship donors highlighted throughout this newsletter. Scholarship support is often what makes it possible for students to access and complete their education and training at Cuyahoga Community College, where futures begin. ■

Jack, Joseph and Morton Mandel Scholars Academy Selected

The Jack, Joseph and Morton Mandel Humanities Center welcomed its inaugural class of 24 Mandel Scholars on Friday, January 22, 2016 in the newly-renovated facility on Tri-C's Eastern Campus.

Made possible through the generosity of the Jack, Joseph and Morton Mandel Foundation and the Mandel Supporting Foundations, the Center provides a unique liberal arts learning environment with programming designed to cultivate the next generation of leaders in Northeast Ohio.

"The students selected for the inaugural class of Mandel Scholars are passionate, engaged learners," said Lauren Onkey, chair and dean of the Jack, Joseph and Morton Mandel Humanities Center. "They represent the diversity of our community and the breadth of programs across all Tri-C campuses." ■
