

FALL 2022 COURSE FORMATS GUIDE

Tri-C offers courses in these formats: online, blended and in-person.

For on-campus lecture courses, students can generally expect to spend two hours per credit hour (outside of formal class time) to study and complete assignments each week. The number of hours required to receive course credit is listed under “Other Hours” on the syllabus. For example, a 3-credit course may require up to six additional hours to study and complete assignments each week.

Courses offered in other formats (blended, online, etc.) have equivalent workloads. Those worth more credit hours and those that meet in shorter parts of term (14-week, 8-week, etc.) require more instruction time and out-of-class study.

Please keep these time commitments in mind when scheduling courses and choosing formats.

If you need further assistance with choosing the right modality for you, please speak with a counselor.

COURSE FORMATS

Online: No Set Meeting Times

These fully online courses are delivered asynchronously. This means that students complete course materials on their own time to meet listed deadlines.
